The Roman Foes of the Pope

Through a stroll around the city center guests will discover two stories of Rome's Inquisition during the XVI century. They will first of all visit Campo De' Fiori, learning about the controversial and mysterious story of Giordano Bruno that in this very place was burned by the Roman Inquisition in the year 1600. Another victim of the Inquisition was Galileo Galilei: Galileo was heavily persecuted and finally had to recant his discoveries precisely in the extraordinary monument exclusively open for the occasion. Guests will stroll among Baroque paintings, a statue by Bernini and ancient books dating back to the 1500s; they will admire this precious historical place where both Galileo and Giordano sought refuge, through the expert guidance of our art historian.
